

This will confirm my stance on the FCC changing the Indiana Law concerning telemarketing phone calls. Since adopted last year, I have seen an immense drop-off in unsolicited telephone calls. I am no longer screening calls through my answering machine, and I find no need for "caller ID." I have become accustomed to this new found freedom, and I do not want it compromised. If I want to contact one of these types of companies, I like the freedom to do it myself if the situation dictates. I do not want these companies to once again have the opportunity to flood my phone line with unsolicited garbage. Please take this opinion seriously, and do not change a good thing here in Indiana. Thank you.
